Two-day safety conference coming to Eugene

“2010: A Safety Odyssey” focus of event

(Salem) – Workers and employers are invited to attend a two-day conference March 9-10, 2010, in Eugene that is designed to highlight the latest safety and health information.

The Department of Consumer and Business Services, Occupational Safety and Health Division (Oregon OSHA) is one of several partners presenting the Cascade Occupational Safety and Health Conference at Eugene’s Valley River Inn, located at 1000 Valley River Way.

The training, designed for anyone who wants to improve on-the-job safety and health performance, is built around the theme, “2010: A Safety Odyssey.” Conference attendees can take advantage of a networking session, along with workshops focused on hazard identification, safety leadership, and accident investigation techniques. Other topics include:

- The business case for safety
- A panel discussion on lessons learned from the H1N1 pandemic
- Managing change in the workplace

The registration fee for both days is $150, or $90 for single-day attendance. For more information or to register, go to www.orosha.org/conferences.
